Get an in-depth look into dispatch priming and the complex cognitive processes affecting dispatchers and call takers.

Researchers have only recently begun to study the complex phenomenon of dispatch priming. There isn't a universally accepted definition. Dispatch priming includes how dispatchers present information to an officer and how that influences how the officer thinks about and responds to a call for service. Said differently, the delivery, tone, and experience of a dispatcher can influence first responder behavior.

This course provides call takers and dispatchers with tools to avoid complacency and bias and thereby help officers in the field make good decisions. Join us for an in-depth look into dispatch priming and the complex cognitive processes affecting dispatchers and call takers.

In this course, you will:

- ✓ Learn what you can control and what you can't
- ✓ Examine the positive and negative aspects of bias and heuristics
- ✓ Learn about the science of decision-making & the psychology of communication

Join us for an in-depth look into dispatch priming and learn why most people don't understand this complex phenomenon.

Instructor Kristy Dorton is an active-duty Public Safety Dispatcher II and Communications Training Officer with the Sacramento Police Department. She is also a California POST Master Instructor. Kristy has studied the complexities of dispatch priming and designed this course to help fellow dispatchers understand the positive and negative aspects of priming.
