Let's face it: teaching cops can be a challenge. They can be a tough audience and when you are teaching cops from your own agency, it's even more difficult.

Did you know there are some simple things you can do that will automatically command their attention? It's true. It's also true that there are some things you should NEVER say and do when you are teaching because they are guaranteed to destroy rapport and sink the whole presentation!

At the Savage Training Group, we take teaching very seriously. Our instructors are constantly learning and perfecting their craft. Now we would like to share some of our best practices with you and help make you a better teacher.

This presentation is perfect for any law enforcement officer who is an instructor regardless or the topic. Whether you teach in a classroom or just give small lectures to your students before range day, this workshop is for you.

Curriculum Includes:

- How to open your class and what to NEVER say!
- How to command students' attention
- How to avoid "Death by Power Point"
- Classroom management techniques
- How to use group work and exercises that work
- Challenging students and personalities
- Making information stick

Scott Savage is the Founder of the Savage Training Group. He recently retired from the Santa Clara PD (CA) after 24 years of service. He worked a variety of assignments and has years of experience training cops, and is a graduate of FEMA's Master Exercise Planning Practitioner program. Senior Instructor Dom Gamboa retired from the San Francisco PD and now serves as a Commander with Broadmoor PD (CA), so he understands training challenges. Both are nationally-certified instructors through the International Association of Directors of Law Enforcement Standards.
